Issue: Racism in Europe

Student Officer: Tim Wagner

General Overview

Europe has seen many different people coming to Europe bringing their own culture and religion with them. The people in Europe often tolerate and accept the foreigners, but obviously there are some exceptions. Especially non Christians and homosexual people get discriminated in some parts of the continent. The rise of the Neo-Nazism takes huge influence in the development of the racism in Europe. The time has come that the UN-members intervene and help combating the problem of the growing racism in Europe.

Especially during the refugee crisis since 2015, many people from the Middle East and Africa came to Europe hoping for better living conditions, but in the modern European countries many people do not tolerate them. In Germany 50% of the population think there are too many refugees in their country, in Hungary there are even more. 70% of the Hungarian populations are thinking in the same way as the German ones. But the people are not only discriminating refugees. Many people are afraid of the number of Islamic people in Europe. Even being homosexual or black can be a huge issue in some parts of Europe.

The discriminated pool of people see their problems especially in finding jobs, getting paid in the same way as non foreigners and getting harmed in public (physically and verbally). There are some organizations helping the discriminated people, e.g. amnesty international or the United Nations Human Rights Council.

The UN-member states have the quest to help combating any kind of discrimination in Europe.

Every human being should have the same rights, all human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights.
